How do you know if a man is in love with you?

9 Undeniable Signs He's In Love With You

He loves me ... he loves me not ... if only finding the answer were as simple as plucking petals off a flower. So, what makes it so hard to determine if a man truly loves you?

A lot of us have ideas about what love should be, what it should look like, and how it should feel. A lot of the time these ideas are plain wrong (we can thank romantic comedies for that). Because of that, some of us might not recognize the real thing when it comes our way. Maybe it's because of these grand visions of love that have been implanted in our minds, but it could also be the result of being burned too many times in the past and having walls up when it comes to either giving love or being able to receive it.

The point is, love is a tricky thing. A guy can say he loves you and not truly mean it, and a guy can love you a lot but not be ready to say it.

Love, as beautiful as it is, can also be scary, and a lot of us keep our guard up until we're sure he feels a certain way in order to keep from getting hurt. As the saying goes, before you fall in love, make sure there is someone there to catch you. The trouble with this is that when you get caught up in trying to figure out if a man loves you, you can no longer be present in the relationship. Instead of connecting, you are stuck in your own worried thoughts, and those thoughts produce fears and insecurities that ultimately block you from getting the love you want.

So how do you know if a man is truly in love with you?

If he shows these 11 signs, then it's pretty safe to say he is.

Take The Quiz: Does He Really Love You?

Click here to take our quick \(and shockingly accurate\) "Does He Really Love You" Quiz right now and find out if he Really loves you...

Does he talk about the future? (Question 1 of 15)

1. The way he looks at you.

He looks at you like you're a unicorn, like he can't believe you exist. He may even come right out and tell you, "I can't believe someone like you exists."

It isn't a look of lust and desire. Instead, it's marked by a certain awe, serenity, and inner calm. It's a look reserved only for you. It's not only the way he looks at you; it's the frequency. He can't stop looking at you; whether you're together or across the room from each other, his gaze will always be oriented toward you.

2. - He wants to give to you.

- - ----- < ^ ~ , , ~ ^ > ----- - -

- - ----- < ^ ~ , , ~ ^ > ----- - -

Real love is about giving, not taking. This is why parents typically love their children more than their children love them. You would think it would be the opposite. From birth through our teenage years (and sometimes beyond!) kids take and parents give. Every parent will tell you that you never know real love until you have a child, and that's because this kind of love is all about giving.

When you love someone, you want to give that person everything you have. This isn't about material possessions. You want to give by being the best you can, you want to make them happy, to enhance their life, you want to do things for them that will make them happy.

Love isn't merely a feeling; it's a verb and it comes across in actions. The biggest action that indicates a man loves you is when he gives you all he can.

3. He really sees you.

He notices things about you that others don't (maybe he even sees things in you that you don't!)

He notices how you interact with others, how people feel in your presence, how your mind works, how you process emotions, how you express yourself. He pays attention to all the little details and he remembers them. He appreciates the full scope of who you are, really – both the good and the bad.

He doesn't just love you, he loves things about you. Really loving people doesn't mean you love the way they make you feel (although many people believe that's what love is), it's about loving them as they are at their core. This sort of love has nothing to do with how good that person makes you feel about yourself.

That's not to say someone you love can't or won't make you feel good about yourself, but you can't truly love people only because they make you feel good. That's a very selfish kind of love, a love that feeds your need to feel good in the moment, not just a life-changing, deep love.

When someone really sees you, he sees not just everything you are but everything you want to be, and he'll let you know when you're falling short. The catch? This may actually make you feel bad about yourself. If you're being a jerk to strangers, treating a friend poorly, or not living up to your obligations somehow, someone who loves you will let you know. It may not feel good, but it's a sign that he really sees you, all of you, and cares about you. (I go into greater depth on this in my article on what no one tells you about being in a good relationship.)

4. Your happiness is as important to him as his own.

Your happiness may be even more important! When you love someone, really love someone, their happiness is your happiness. This is especially true for men who need to feel like they can make a woman happy. If you tell him that something makes you unhappy and he keeps doing it, this is not a sign that he's in love with you. A man who loves you will avoid doing things that make you unhappy and will learn the things will make you happy, and he'll make an effort to do those things.

5. He misses you when you're apart.

A man can shower you with all the love in the world while he's with you, because it's nice to be with someone else and to connect and be affectionate, but what is he like when he's not with you? Does he miss you? Does he make an effort to reach out? Or does he disappear for days on end and then tell you he's sorry, he's just been "super swamped?"

When you love someone, you yearn for their presence and miss them when they're gone. It doesn't mean you are constantly thinking about them every waking minute, because that would be an unhealthy obsession, not love, but the thought of them always lingers in the background. Things remind you of them, something happens and you want to tell them, you just feel a constant connection even when you're apart.

He'll be in touch, he'll send you funny things he finds online or links to articles he thinks you'd like, or he'll tell you about something funny that happened to him that he thought you'd appreciate.

Join up with a volunteer non-profit program.

Volunteering is a great way to meet new people, get some exercise, and involve yourself in a positive project that can lift your spirit. It also comes without a cost (or very little) to you and can provide a lot of entertainment and a fulfilling day when you're in the right mindset.

I've come to spend more and more of my time volunteering, serving on various committees and people helping groups in the community. I am on a few local area towns and Church committees. It is hands-down the best thing I have ever done. Be a volunteer with your local Lions Club or other Non Profit Org. and you will feel much better about yourself. Be only a volunteer – for a time - if later you wish, you may later to join this local Lions Club it is later and it is up to you. You'll be meeting other people who share your interests, which gives you an easy opener when striking up a conversation. Meet many new people and also maybe meet the next Him or Her for YOUR life. 6. He keeps you in the loop.

I remember very early in my relationship with my husband I knew he really cared about me because he would always keep me in the loop, even when it wasn't necessary. For instance, before our third date I texted him to confirm the time and he didn't respond for about 45 - minutes and when he did he apologized for the delay and said he was out with friends and not checking his phone.

I don't consider 45 - minutes to be that significant of a time lag and didn't need the explanation, but it made me feel cared for and it showed me that he considered me someone important and didn't want me to think that something else was more important. He would do considerate things like that constantly, and that's how I knew he loved me long before he even said it.

When a guy loves you, he won't ever leave you hanging. He'll keep you informed about what he's up to, not because he has to, but because he wants to.

7. He's there for you even when it's inconvenient.

Being in love is easy when everything is going great and it's all smooth sailing, but what happens when you hit a rough patch, or when you need him?

How does he respond when there is a problem, when he needs to be there for you even if there are other things he would rather be doing?

Love is other-focused; it's not about one's own needs and desires, it's about factoring in someone else. When a man loves you, nothing will be more important than being there for you when you need him. It may not always be his ideal scenario, but he'll step up and be there.

8. He doesn't give up.

He puts his all into the relationship and really commits to making it work. When you love someone, you don't quit without a fight.

I remember in the beginning of my relationship with my husband, a lot of my deep-seated relationship fears started bubbling to the surface. I had been blindsided by breakups in the past; I'd had men tell me they loved me and then they left me. It's hard to just forget such things and wipe the slate clean. Even though this relationship was totally different from anything else I'd ever experienced, those fears lingered. I remember one conversation where I brought this up to him, and he told me that if this relationship didn't last, it would be a mutual parting and we would both see it coming. He wasn't going to just leave; he was going to put in everything he had. He did and so did I, and fortunately it all worked out!

If a man says he loves you but doesn't want to try anymore, or gives up because he thinks it's too hard, then it probably wasn't real love. You don't give up on love unless you have put everything you have into making it work, and it was just impossible (and this is something that both people will usually be able to clearly recognize).

There are obviously times where someone can truly love you, but because you're just not right for each other, or maybe because you aren't willing to put in the necessary effort, that he will walk away even though he loves you, but only after giving it his all.

9. You don't worry how he feels — you just know.

Similar to what I said in my article about how to know if a guy likes you, when a guy love you, you just know. It's obvious to you and to everyone around you. You'll have a feeling of peace and calm and just knowing.

When someone truly loves you, his behavior and way of being with you won't arouse feelings of insecurity/fear/anxiety/worry in you (as long as you yourself are emotionally healthy. If you're prone to having those feelings no matter what, then they are probably generated within you).

Check in with yourself and see where it's coming from. Usually, when we feel uneasy, like the rug is going to be pulled out from under us, it's because the relationship isn't standing on a stable ground because the guy isn't sure of how he feels. When someone loves you, he shows it and you just know it, even before he says it.

I hope after reading this article you're totally clear on the signs a man is in love with you. But before you go, I need to tell you that there's a crucial period in your relationship that will determine if you and he end up together, or if the relationship falls apart.

At some point, he will start to back off. He may lose interest, he may pull away, he may suddenly need space. Do you know how to handle it when he does this?

If not, you will probably make one of the major mistakes that most women make that can irreparably destroy your relationship. Read this now so you don't risk losing him forever: If He's Pulling Away, Do This...

The next problem you may run into is when he gets to the point where he asks himself: Is this the woman I want to commit to for the long-term?

The fate of your relationship lies in the answer to that question. Do you know how men decide if a woman is girlfriend, or even wife, material? The type of woman that a man wants to commit himself to? If not you need to read this next: The #1 Things Men Desire in a Woman

In summary...

These Are the Biggest Signs He's In Love With You:

1. The way he looks at you.
2. He wants to give to you.
3. He treats you like a priority.

4. He wants to immerse himself in your life.
5. He really sees you.
6. Your happiness is as important to him as his own.
7. He misses you when you're apart.
8. He keeps you in the loop.
9. He's there for you even when it's inconvenient.
10. He doesn't give up.
11. You don't worry how he feels — you just know.

7 ways to know you're dating a man who loves himself

There's a huge difference between someone being selfish or having a more-than-healthy appreciation of themselves and someone whose self - obsession. Its damaging to relationships.

True narcissism is an extreme obsession with oneself and a need to constantly feel loved and appreciated. There is a huge difference between someone being selfish or having a more-than-healthy appreciation of themselves and someone whose self - obsession might actually be damaging to your relationship. Here are some signs you might be dating someone whose self - esteem is actually a detriment to your relationship.

1. He adores compliments and attention.

This man loves hearing only positive things about himself, to the point where it makes you feel the need to do it constantly.

In most situations, just a good compliment could keep you in his good graces. He's at his happiest (and your relationship feels at its best) whenever you're putting him first.

2. He's never wrong.

Whenever something happens in or out of your relationship, he wants to remain blameless. If something goes wrong at work, it's always a coworker's fault. If he forgot to pay a bill on time, it's because whoever he owes failed to show up. He hates being blamed for anything.

3. He can never take criticism, even when it's constructive.

If you've ever tried to intervene when he's, maybe complaining about a problem at work, he won't hear it. It's not just that he can't handle you disagreeing with him about who is at fault. It's not even just that he can't stand the idea of being wrong.

It's that he refuses to believe he's not handling the situation the best way possible. He doesn't and cannot hear you trying to be helpful or add a fresh perspective. He just hears you telling him he isn't right.

4. He dominates your conversations and always steers them toward himself.

Not only is he always the one talking, but he's always trying to talk about himself to whoever. He's doesn't want to hear about your problems or accomplishments and gets irritated when you talk about them for "too long." He doesn't mind talking at length about his day at work but will rush through your own day.

5. Even when he's wrong, he always manages to make you feel guilty.

He's quick to spin things back on you even when it's he that is at fault.

You might go into an argument because you haven't heard from him in a week, but you'll end up feeling bad that you were the one bugging him because he was so busy. He likely can't accept responsibility, and so if something went wrong, it has to be someone else's fault.

6. He's a charmer.

This type of men tends to be really charming and endearing. That kind of self-centered overblown sense of esteem can be compelling. It might wear thin, but it tends to draw you in, and when things are good, they're really good. But when things are bad, they're beyond frustrating and miserable.

7. You're always doing what he wants to do.

You rarely get to have a choice on what you do on date night, or what you watch together, or who you hang out with. And it's not because you're laid-back. You've tried getting him to do things you're interested in, and he just finds excuses or throws a tantrum or even bluntly tell you, he won't do it – he could care less if you like it or not.

When You Fall In Love With A Girl Who Loves Herself

There’s something different about a girl who loves herself.

A girl who loves herself has come to terms with her shortcomings and flaws, she has acknowledged her fears and failures, and she loves who she is, despite these things.

A girl who loves herself is comfortable in her own skin, secure on her own two feet, and confident in the woman she has become.

She is strong, in her own way. She is independent, and she is bold.

She wants what’s best for herself and she walks with her head high. She doesn’t settle for mediocre anything — especially mediocre love.

A girl who loves herself is not proud or boastful; she is instead aware of herself, of her needs, and of the needs of others.

She has no problem putting others first because she knows how it feels to put herself first. She can make decisions without being wishy-washy; she can step back and choose for herself what is right.

She can inspire and she can encourage.

She loves herself, and so she loves her life and the people in it.

A girl who loves herself is different. She is not insecure or driven to please everyone she meets. She doesn’t always try to be what others want her to be. She doesn’t change her opinion based on who she’s around.

A girl who loves herself is a partner. She is a challenger. She is an inspiration.

She will build her significant other up. She will stand beside him and love him fully. She will never lean on him for every single thing, but be able to balance on her two feet, strong and poised.

She is the girl that knows herself and knows what she needs. She doesn't look to men for answers. She doesn't look for men to make her feel whole.

She is the girl with passion in her eyes, pursuing the things she loves. She is the girl that can be silly or serious, wild or calm. She can be who she is and be proud.

She is the girl you want, because you know that she doesn't need you. You know that she is capable, strong, and so complete on her own.

And you fall for her, because you know that she will change your life, that she is someone with an identity, with a uniqueness and a flair that is solely hers.

She is the woman that terrifies you. But you know that because she loves herself, she will have no problem loving you. So, let her.

32 Signs He Loves You Without Saying It: Actions That Mean “I Love You”

How do I know if he loves me without asking him if he hasn't said it? Here's the best ways to know if a guy loves you (without saying it) by looking for these telltale signs.

You've been together for a while and you're reasonably certain you love him, but does he love you back? Sometimes you think he does, but other times, you're not so sure.

Saying “I love you” can be terrifying, so it's entirely possible that he feels it, but is just afraid of saying it out loud. After all, few people willingly put themselves in such a vulnerable position. But you can't live with this uncertainty – you need to find out, once and for all, if he loves you or not.

Here are 32 signs he loves you, even if he doesn't say it.

1. He holds your hand.

A guy who only wants your body won't hold your hand. It's a sign that he wants to tell the world you're his beloved. If he also does it when you're alone, it's clear he always wants to be close to you.

2. He kisses your forehead.

And speaking of cute gestures, there is nothing more intimate and sweet than forehead kisses. There is no lust to it, no ulterior motive. Just a chaste, affectionate, and slightly protective gesture. It's love, alright.

3. He smiles randomly when he's with you.

Do you know that amazing feeling when you're just so happy inside, you feel like you're going to burst? And you just keep smiling like an idiot, because you can't stop? That's how he feels when he's around you.

4. He can't keep his hands off you.

Pay attention to what he's like around you – does he always manage to touch you in small ways? A hand on your waist, or back, an arm around your shoulder, holding your hand, a protective arm on your knee?

5. He introduces you to mom.

When a man voluntarily, uncoerced, and unprovoked decides that he wants to take you home to meet mom, then you've won. You have my congratulations! Men don't waste time with this unless they're serious about the gal.

6. He introduces you to “the gang”.

The other “test” is his friends – has he taken it upon himself to introduce you to them? And they like you? Well, he's clearly been telling them good things about you; maybe even the L word.

7. He puts a lot of passion in his kisses.

Kissing isn't reserved for couples in love, but there's a difference between a lustful kiss and a loving one. If he can't get enough of your lips and really gets into kissing you, even without it leading to sex, there's a pretty good chance you've got him hooked.

8. He listens to you.

You know that annoying thing men do where you're talking and they just ignore you and occasionally throw in an absent - minded "Uh-huh"? He doesn't do that to you. By god, he actually seems interested in what you're saying and doesn't tune you out.

9. He talks about the future.

When a man is afraid of commitment or isn't planning on sticking around, he doesn't make plans with you. So, if he's been hinting to your future together, it's a sign he thinks you're a keeper.

10. He calls "just because".

A sign that he thinks about you often is that he calls or texts without a specific reason. He just wants to see how you are, hear your voice, and talk to you a little. He wouldn't feel the need if you wouldn't occupy his mind.

11. You make him laugh.

The more he laughs around you, the more he likes you. He just thinks you're the best, and what's not to love?

12. He makes time for you.

We're all extremely busy, and time is precious, but he chooses to spend it with you, and often. That says something, doesn't it? You are his priority.

13. He misses you.

A man's behavior when you're not around is just as important as the one in your presence. Does he think about you? Tell you constantly that he misses you? Is there a gap in his life when you're not there? It means you've successfully become a part of him.

- - ----- < ^ ~ , , ~ ^ > ----- - -

- - ----- < ^ ~ , , ~ ^ > ----- - -

- - ----- < ^ ~ , , ~ ^ > ----- - -

14. He stands up taller.

If he stands a little straighter, a little taller when you're around, he wants to impress you and appear attractive. It's cute, isn't it?

15. He gives you gifts that mean something.

On our first anniversary, my boyfriend gifted me a first edition of "Love In The Time Of Cholera"; he remembered I quoted it on our first date. You see, anyone can buy expensive jewelry, but it takes a special person to give you something meaningful.

16. He's domestic.

If he's switching from bars and drinking to staying home and cooking with you, that's something to pay attention to. If he'd rather be old and lazy on the couch with you than go out with his friends, that's a declaration of love, right there.

17. He makes an effort with your kids.

Not only is he not bothered that you have a past and a family, but he is actively embracing his role in their lives. He always brings a little something for your little ones and genuinely enjoys spending time with them. Doesn't that just make you swoon?

18. He's a little bit nervous around you.

It's always cute when men are nervous, especially if they blush. The fact that you make him nervous means he really, really likes you.

19. He turns to look at you often.

Does he turn around to look at you, even when he's doing something else? Does he look up from his phone to smile at you? Check to see what you're doing? Catch your eye across the bar, even as he's talking to friends? You know what that means.

20. He compliments your personality.

Telling you you're hot is great, but what really makes your heart melt is when he admits how much he enjoys your sense of humor or your childish laughter.

21. He inconveniences himself for you.

Helping you out isn't always convenient, and at times, it even involves something he hates. But he does it anyway, because it's for you and because drumroll please he loves you.

22. He's always doing nice things for you.

Someone who is interested and involved with their partner is going to find ways to do nice things for them. Breakfast in bed, buying you chocolate when he comes home from work, or even just a backrub when you're on your period.

23. He stands up for you.

It goes without saying that a man who loves you will fiercely protect you and stand up for you when you're not being treated right. Be proud!

24. He stays the night.

If he's interested in just sex, he'll make any excuse to get the hell out after the deed is over and done with. But if he stays, he's there for more than just sexual release.

25. He supports you.

A good and loving partner supports your dreams and efforts, whatever they may be, and even if it means he'll see you less or if he disagrees. It's not only a sign of maturity, but one of love.

26. He gives you space.

Love doesn't mean smothering your partner to death! Sometimes, love is found in the space in between two partners. He understands you need it and he gives it to you, unprompted.

27. He puts you first

A famous verse says that love is selfless, and it's true. If he puts you first, even to his own detriment, then there's no real question about it.

28. He's comfortable at your place.

When you said "mi casa es tu casa" he took it and ran with it. He doesn't mind making the trek to your place and spending time there, he likes it. Hell, he's even brought an extra set of PJs and a toothbrush. The man is here for the long haul.

29. He shares things with you.

He doesn't like to open up about personal things, but with you it's different. He knows you would never judge him and that he can be vulnerable around you, which is one of the biggest compliments he can give you.

30. He picks up on your behaviors.

Did you know that couples in love tend to mirror each other's behavior? It's called isopraxism and it's adorable.

31. He lets you win.

Listen, men love to win. It's what they do; they're winners. So, admitting someone else is right, or even letting someone else win literally, in a game, costs them their ego. And he'll gladly give it to you, because he loves you.

32. He's just a little bit jealous.

You're his and he doesn't want to share you with anyone. Not in a possessive way, just in a loving way that says he's here long -t erm, exclusively, and he wants you to be too.

This article shows you all the best ways to tell if a guy loves you, now in any relationship I've found there are 2 pivotal moments that determine if your relationship ends in heartbreak or you get to live happily ever after so it's vitally important that you take the next step and read this right now, because at some point the man you want is going to ask himself: Is this the woman I should commit to for the long term? That answer determines everything... Do you know how men determine if a woman is girlfriend material (the type of woman he commits himself to) or if he sees you as just a fling? If not you need to read this next: The #1 Thing Men Desire In A Woman...

The second problem almost all women experience: At some point he starts to lose interest. He doesn't call you back or he becomes emotionally closed off. He seems like he's losing interest or pulling away – do you know what to do? If not you're putting your relationship and the future of your love life in great danger, read this now or risk losing him forever: If He's Pulling Away, Do This...

In summary...

Join up with a volunteer non-profit program.

Volunteering is a great way to meet new people, get some exercise, and involve yourself in a positive project that can lift your spirit. It also comes without a cost (or very little) to you and can provide a lot of entertainment and a fulfilling day when you're in the right mindset.

I've come to spend more and more of my time volunteering, serving on various committees and people helping groups in the community. I am on a few local area towns and Church committees. It is hands-down the best thing I have ever done. Be a volunteer with your local Lions Club or other Non Profit Org. and you will feel much better about yourself. Be only a volunteer – for a time - if later you wish, you may later to join this local Lions Club it is later and it is up to you. You'll be meeting other people who share your interests, which gives you an easy opener when striking up a conversation. Meet many new people and also maybe meet the next Him or Her for YOUR life. This Web Site is sponsored by a Lions Club.
